Sunday alcohol re-vote possible

Date	March 01, 2013
Section(s)	Local News
Byline	By NIKKI WILEY The Brunswick News

City residents would get the chance to weigh in on Sunday alcohol sales at grocery, convenience and package stores again if the Brunswick City Commission agrees to put the issue back on the ballot in November.

Lawyers will discuss the possibility of a new referendum that would allow Sunday sales of alcohol in the city limits when the commission meets at 6 p.m. Wednesday at Old City Hall, 1229 Newcastle St. No vote is expected to be taken at the meeting.

Voters in unincorporated Glynn County lifted the prohibition on Sunday sales in November 2011, with 54.9 percent of voters in favor of the change.

City residents did just the opposite, voting down Sunday sales by a small margin, with 845 against it, or 51.4 percent, and 799 votes, or 48.6 percent, favoring it. Alcohol by the drink is still allowed on Sundays with food orders in restaurants in the city.

The playing field just hasn't been level since voters in the county approved Sunday sales in stores, say owners of some stores in the city that sell alcohol for off-premise consumption.

Jim Gibson, owner of JP's Wine and Spirits at 3304 Glynn Ave., Brunswick, isn't sure that he would open on Sundays even if sales were allowed in the city, but he wants the ability to decide for himself.

"Personally, I'd rather not be open on Sunday, but if it's profitable to maintain my business, I would do it," Gibson asid.

Some city convenience and package stores are losing customers to county establishments.

Pub Package, a liquor store at 1627 Frederica Road, St. Simons Island, is getting more business.

"We have consistently seen (sales) increase on Sundays," said Marc Weber, owner. "It started out a bit slow. It took people a little while to realize they could buy on Sundays."

It's been worth opening on Sundays, Weber said. Sales may not have dramatically jumped on Sundays, but they are now spread evenly throughout the weekend.

"We're happy about our sales and we're going to continue to stay open," Weber said.

But not everyone is as optimistic about Sunday sales.

Phillip Bluestein owns package stores in both the city and in unincorporated Glynn County and is worried about being able to keep both businesses open on Sundays. He'd have to pay four employees to keep the stores open, rather than two.

"If I could vote, I'd vote no. But I'm going to beg people to vote no," said Bluestein, who owns Grog Shoppe, 1701 Norwich St., Brunswick, and Sportsman Package, 4198 Norwich Street Extension, in unincorporated Glynn County.

City commissioners say they are willing to allow voters to have another say.

"The county is making pretty good revenue off of a lot of city residents, because a lot of city residents go out to the county... to buy on Sunday," Commissioner James Brooks said.

Brunswick is losing tax revenue from sales limited to Monday through Saturday, Mayor Bryan Thompson said.

"At this point in time, any revenue stream that the city can access we certainly want to be able to do that," Thompson said.

Police say Sublett case continues

The Georgia Bureau of Investigation and Glynn County Police are still investigating the death of Glynn County Commissioner Tom Sublett.

Medical examiners with the GBI's crime lab in Savannah ruled Sublett's death a suicide in February, but other details have not been released because the investigation has not concluded, said Mike McDaniel, special agent in charge of the GBI's Kingsland office.

He said determining when the investigation would finish is difficult because of circumstances beyond the bureau's control. McDaniel did not comment further.

Sublett, 52, was found dead Dec. 11, 2012, in the Frederica River near Gascoigne Bluff Park on St. Simons Island. Sublett had suffered a gunshot wound to his head and his hands were found bound in front of him with a zip tie, used to band wires and cables.

Examiners determined Sublett died by drowning.

City puts alcohol sales on table - not ballot

Date	March 07, 2013
Section(s)	Local News
Byline	By NIKKI WILEY The Brunswick News

The Brunswick city commission took a first step Wednesday toward allowing voters a chance to reconsider whether they want to allow alcoholic beverages to be sold in retail outlets on Sundays.

Voters rejected the idea in 2011.

Wednesday, the commission received a draft ordinance that could be placed on the Nov. 5 municipal ballot for voters to decide whether to allow convenience, grocery and package stores in the city to sell alcoholic beverages between 12:30 and 11:30 p.m. Sundays.

Commissioners did not discuss the ordinance, and will consider it at a regular commission meeting March 20.

Some business owners who sell alcoholic beverages in the city say they are losing money to businesses in the unincorporated areas of Glynn County, where beer, wine and liquor can be sold in stores on Sundays.

County voters approved it in a referendum in November 2011, with a 54.9 percent approval.

City residents voted down Sunday sales in the same referendum by a small margin, with 845 against it, or 51.4 percent, and 799 votes, or 48.6 percent, favoring it. Alcohol is still sold by the drink in restaurants in the city with food orders.

Already on the Nov. 5 ballot is the election of a mayor, the North Ward Commission post held by Cornell Harvey and the South Ward Commission post held by James Brooks.

Mayor Bryan Thompson will complete his second four-year term this year and cannot seek another term, because of term limits. He has said he will not run for any other political office.

In other business, the commission:

* Approved a conditional use permit to allow Gwen Williams to operate an automobile repair garage at 2814 Norwich St.
* Approved applications for two federal crime-fighting grants.
* Appointed Bernie Fulton, who has been active in the NAACP, to the Brunswick Historic Preservation Board.
* Deferred a decision on an alcohol license for Bruce Carrecker to sell alcohol at J's Lounge, 1824 Norwich St.

City delays alcohol on Sundays vote

Date	March 21, 2013
Section(s)	Local News
Byline	By NIKKI WILEY The Brunswick News

Brunswick City Commissioners are a step closer to deciding whether to add a Sunday alcohol sales referendum to the Nov. 5 ballot.

Commissioners say they will decide whether to send the question back to residents at their next meeting, scheduled for 6 p.m. April 3 at Old City Hall, 1229 Newcastle St. No vote can be taken by the council until the issue is properly advertised.

If approved by the commission and then voters, stores would be allowed to sell alcoholic beverages between 12:30 and 11:30 p.m. Sundays.

Business owners have asked the commission to put it back on the ballot. Those who sell alcohol in the city limits say they are losing money to competitors in unincorporated Glynn County, where Sunday sales are permitted.

Already on the Nov. 5 ballot is the election of mayor, the North Ward Commission post held by Cornell Harvey and the South Ward Commission post held by James Brooks.

Mayor Bryan Thompson will complete his second and final four-year term this year.

The commission also amended its ordinance for granting alcohol beverage licenses to reflect that no one who has been arrested for driving under the influence within two years can be given a license to sell alcohol.

Also, the commission:

* Approved a conditional use petition to allow a bakery and delicatessen to operate at 801 Egmont St.
* Approved reclassifying the position of engineering technician to assistant city engineer, which would be a new position.
* Approved granting an alcohol beverage license to J's Lounge, 1824 Norwich St.

City gets re-vote on Sunday alcohol

Date	April 04, 2013
Section(s)	Local News
Byline	By NIKKI WILEY The Brunswick News

Brunswick voters will get a second chance to decide whether alcoholic beverages can be sold Sundays in stores.

City commissioners approved an ordinance at their Wednesday meeting to let voters decide in a referendum on the Nov. 5 ballot whether to allow sales between 12:30 and 11:30 p.m. Sundays.

They did not discuss the ordinance, but voted unanimously to put the issue on the ballot. Voting to give the referendum a second chance, after voters rejected a similar proposal in 2011, were Mayor Bryan Thompson and commissioners Cornell Harvey, Julie Martin, Johnny Cason and James Brooks.

County voters approved Sunday sales in a referendum in November 2011, with 55 percent voting yes, but city voters rejected it for the city by a narrow margin, with 51 percent, or 845 votes, against it. Alcohol is sold by the drink with food orders on Sundays in restaurants in the city.

Some business operators in the city say being unable to sell alcoholic beverages on Sundays puts them at a disadvantage with competitors in unincorporated areas of the county.

Already on the Nov. 5 ballot is the election of a mayor, the North Ward commission post held by Harvey and the South Ward commission post held by Brooks.

Harvey has said he plans to run for mayor. Brooks, who faces criminal charges in Glynn and Camden counties for alleged influence peddling and in Glynn County for allegedly interfering with witnesses in the murder investigation of 13-month-old Antonio Santiago, has not said what his plans are.

Thompson will complete his second four-year term this year and cannot seek another term as mayor because of term limits. He has said he will not run for any other political office.

City residents have until Oct. 7 to register to vote in the Nov. 5 election.

In other business Wednesday, the commission:

* Approved new fees and fines for code enforcement, engineering and building inspections.
* Denied a lease proposal for a billboard in the historic district.
* Approved, following a closed session, a $76,000 workers compensation settlement under the condition that the employee resign and not seek future employment with the city.
